

Some basic etiquette to remember –

I. Ásatrú blóts are for the Æsir and Vanir only. We do not insist that they are the only real gods, nor do we discriminate against other religions, but the blót is sacred and dedicated to them alone.

II. Keep hails concise and on topic. It is good form to hail the god or goddess being honored before beginning your own hail.

III. Often when someone makes their hail, the rest of the groups echoes it. If someone hails something improper, do not echo the hail.

IV. If stuck for a hail, either say "Hail the Gods and Goddesses all!" or copy another person's hail. Either is good form and proper.

V. Only drink once from the horn as it is passed, and if it is nearly empty, call over the person passing the horn (sometimes referred to as the Valkyrie) to fill it again.
